RELEASE FORM FOR RESERVE MATERIALS

The University of New Mexico Health Sciences Library and Informatics Center acknowledges and supports the appropriate use (i.e., reproduction, distribution, performance, and display) of copyrighted works and materials for teaching, scholarship, and research purposes consistent with the standards of fair use as enumerated in federal copyright law. All faculty, instructors and other authorized personnel should be familiar with the fair use standard and are expected to adhere to federal copyright laws. It is essential that members of the University community make a diligent effort to stay within the bounds of copyright law.

The Library is unable to put course packs, photocopies of pages from workbooks, compilations of photocopied readings, and complimentary copies of textbooks on Reserve. Instructors may place compilations of their own lecture notes and examinations on Reserve, provided that they are the owners of the copyright for these materials.

Materials will be placed on reserve only for the duration of the class. Materials will not be kept on Reserve for more than one semester without permission of the copyright holder.

I acknowledge having read the UNM HSLIC guidelines and have determined that my use of the attached materials falls within fair use as summarized in the attached guidelines, or that I have obtained written copyright permission from the copyright holder.

Fair use Copyright Guidelines Summary

BOOKS

Entire books may be placed on reserve unless they are complimentary copies. Only one (1) photocopied chapter from a book may be placed on reserve unless the instructor received the copyright holder's written permission to include more. This applies to edited collections of readings and essays because each reading is considered a chapter.

JOURNALS and NEWSPAPERS

Only one (1) article from an issue of one journal may be placed on reserve unless the instructor received the copyright holder's written permission to include more than one article. Newspapers are treated the same as journals.

MULTIPLE COPIES

Only one copy of photocopied material is allowed for every 20 students enrolled in a class, or any fraction thereof, but no more than 9 copies per class.

US GOVERNMENT PUBLICATIONS

Most government publications are in the public domain, i.e., they are not copyrighted, allowing unlimited use and reproduction.

CONSUMABLES

These materials are not appropriate for reserve because one of the tenets of fair use is that such use not affect the market value. Consumables include workbooks, exercises, standardized tests and test booklets, answer sheets, etc.

COURSEPACKS

Custom published anthologies are prepared for sale through local copy centers and bookstores and are, therefore, not appropriate for reserve because one of the tenets of fair use is that such use not affect the market value.

ELECTRONIC MATERIAL

Materials may be available electronically to students through the library's paid online subscriptions (e.g., Ovid Full Text Journals). Licensing arrangements are replacing traditional library purchases so there is no one "standard" license. Licensing agreements vary among publishers, but generally the HSC library allows access via the Internet. Under the agreements, each student may be authorized to make a single copy of the material for his/her personal use and is expressly forbidden from making further electronic distribution of the digital work.
