Clinical Research Volunteer Registry

What is the Clinical Research Volunteer Registry?

The Clinical Research Volunteer Registry is an online recruitment database. The registry is managed and maintained by the UNM Clinical & Translational Science Center. This database is used by researchers to recruit eligible participants into institutionally reviewed and approved clinical trials conducted at UNM. Access to the database is limited to the Research Participant Advocate (RPA) and a database manager.

How do I enroll in the registry?

Visit our website at CTSCTrials.health.unm.edu to access and complete the enrollment form. If you do not have access to the internet you may contact the Research Participant Advocate to obtain a paper form. If you opt to complete the paper version, you will be asked to visit the Clinical & Translational Science Center to sign and complete paperwork.

How does the registry work?

Researchers first obtain approval from the UNM Health Sciences Center Human Research Protections Office to use the registry for recruitment purposes. The researcher then contacts the RPA to obtain a list of potential study participants. Once identified, the researcher then contacts eligible patients to schedule a screening visit.

How can I withdraw my information?

You may withdraw or modify your information at any time. You can do so via email at CTSC@salud.unm.edu or in writing to:
