

Burke Gurney, P.T., Ph.D., Associate Professor

Burke Gurney graduated from the University of Texas Medical Branch in Galveston, Texas with a B.S. in P.T. in 1982. He relocated to Santa Fe, New Mexico where he practiced physical therapy in a variety of settings including sports medicine, orthopaedics, and geriatrics. He completed his Masters in Liberal Arts at St. Johns College in Santa Fe in 1989. He entered academia in 1992 when he started a physical therapist assistant program at San Juan College in Farmington, NM. He remained there until the program was accredited in 1994. He then moved to Albuquerque to teach at the University of New Mexico Physical Therapy Program and received his doctoral degree in exercise physiology in the Spring of 2000. Dr. Gurney teaches physical agents, exercise physiology, and orthopaedic evaluation and treatment. His Research interests include applied physiology, physical agents, and kinesiology.