Students Exploring Careers in Health

Students Exploring Careers in Health, or SECIH, is an organization born out of a student project, now led by a group of dedicated health professions students committed to sharing knowledge about the healthcare professions with students at under-resourced high schools around New Mexico.

Recruiting now!

IPE Honors students will get executive credit for actively participating

SECIH will host a group of students from a selected high school for a day on the UNM Health Sciences Center campus. Students will have the opportunity to talk with healthcare professionals and health professions students, tour the campus and participate in a number of interactive workshops.

Our goal is to increase the awareness of the spectrum of professions in healthcare for the student participants, and hopefully instill in them the understanding that these professions are open to them and attainable for their futures.
