UNM School of Medicine Support Guide 2025-2026

Dear Students:

Welcome to the University of New Mexico School of Medicine. Your years in training to become a health care professional or biomedical scientist may be some of the most satisfying and rewarding years of your lives.

You will inevitably face many challenges on your long and rigorous journeys to becoming clinicians and scientists. At times, you may feel overwhelmed or confused, stressed, or disillusioned.

The “SOM Support Guide” will provide you with resources to use during the times you feel well and the times you feel challenged. Knowing how and when to seek help is an important skill to have when you are a health care professional or biomedical scientist. Often intervention with a trained professional can facilitate your capacity to cope with and resolve problems in a constructive and growth-related manner.

Please do not hesitate to contact any of the people or resources listed, and please let me know if you come across information in this guide that will be useful to others in the future.

When Should I Seek Help?

- When you have discussed your feelings with family and/or friends and they/you do not feel they can help.
- When you choose not to discuss your feelings further with family and/or friends for fear of “burdening” them.
- When you feel isolated and believe that you have no one who cares about how you feel.
- When you don’t spontaneously snap out of feeling badly within a few days to several weeks.
- When you feel stuck in a behavior, thoughts, or feelings that you want to change but can’t change on your own.
- When you want the perspective of a trained professional.
- When you believe your work and/or relationships may be compromised by how you are feeling, thinking, or behaving.
- When you want to learn a specific coping skill, i.e., relaxation, biofeedback, assertiveness, etc.
- When you and your partner want help communicating better (couples counseling).
- When your self-esteem seems to be draining away and/or you feel overwhelmed with responsibilities.
- When you don’t necessarily feel you have a problem but would like to think “preventively” about your emotional health and personal growth.
- When you feel you are using alcohol or illicit drugs to “self-medicate” or to make yourself feel better.
- When you feel burned out and/or emotionally exhausted.
- When you are thinking about self-harm or about suicide.
- When you are engaging in self-harm or self-destructive behavior.
- Whenever you think it would be helpful to you.

SMART is part of the university's overall efforts to reduce sexual violence on campus. It is a victim centered, victim controlled coordinated response team composed of community and university organizations to quickly respond to cases of sexual violence while providing appropriate services to all parties involved.

SMART responders make services for victims a priority. Victims of sexual assault may choose to activate one, or all, components of the response team: medical, counseling, law enforcement, and/or the student conduct process.

If you have been sexually assaulted, it is important to remember it is not your fault. Seek the appropriate services so all your needs can be met. If you wish to be accompanied by a trained and sensitive advocate, you can call the Rape Crisis Center's 24-hr hotline at 505-266-7711 and an advocate will meet you.

You can choose to utilize any or all components of the sexual assault response team.
